In our therapeutic practice we frequently see traumatised people whose symptoms / dissociative processes are getting in the way of a positive therapeutic outcome.

In this 2 day advanced therapy training, Theres Fickl, with Ulrike Meister and Ruth Mykoo will help you understand the important determinants of the body- and gestalt-oriented, action orientated therapy form of the Somatic Psychological Interactive Model (version 30).

The SPIM30 model was developed by Dr Ralf and Irina Vogt at the Trauma Institute Leipzig (Germany) for clients with complex trauma and dissociative processes, to help them make sense of what they experienced there and then and experience in the here and now.

SPIM30 describes deliberate abusive and/or neglectful interpersonal traumatisations as boundary violations in a multi-level model. Findings from neurobiology are included. (S. Porges, Poly-vagal Theory).

The SPIM30 model can be incorporated into any trauma focussed therapeutic approach.

You will be expected to work on your own self development.

How is SPIM30 different from other therapeutic approaches.

This training will introduce you to methods and techniques which will greatly help you to advance within the 3 phased trauma model.

A variety of stabilisation exercises will be introduced and practiced together to support yourself and your clients to track movements and apply the breaks on the poly-vagal ladder.

Psycho education will be taught and practiced, which will support you in explaining complex concepts of transference and perpetrator energies. This will enable your clients to understand their inner psychological conflicts during trauma work.

Different therapy objects (see photographs) will be used to help externalise dissociative processes and to support the emergence of trauma memories.

You will be introduced to SPIM30 methods to examine dreams, nightmares and dissociative gaps in memory so that self-protection (dissociative defences) can be slowly loosened in order to work through the traumatisation. i.e objects to externalise transference and introjection, symbolic soft toys as transitional objects (Beseelbare objects), hoops and much more are used for this purpose. Additionally you will witness the power of connection-supporting materials, like rods, ropes, pillows and blankets to enhance the client-therapist dialogue.

All exercises will be discussed in the group beforehand, after which each training participant will get a chance to practice the SPIM30 techniques in sub groups to experience the therapeutic applications of the theory.

Please bring comfortable shoes and casual clothing.

Please email theres.fickl@icloud.com if you are interested in booking onto this training.
